

Adrian College is seeking an adjunct professor with a M.A. or Ph.D. in the humanities, arts, or sciences to teach two sections of Academic Foundations I in the first-year CORE program. The candidate will teach one or two 3-credit courses designed to help students gain foundational knowledge and practice in critical thinking, writing, and research while also helping students explore the value of a liberal arts degree and the college's legacy of social justice. ABD standing may be considered. The candidate should be willing to follow the syllabus template and objectives, approved textbooks, and supplemental course materials used in all CORE classes. Previous college teaching experience is required.
